✕ DANO, THE DAY TO ENCOUNTER 1,000 YEARS OF GANGNEUNG

Gangneung Danoje is a 1,000-year-old festival that has maintained its legacy even amidst the Japanese colonial period and the Korean War. Dano Day, the fifth day of the fifth lunar month, is the day when the Yang energy is the strongest of the year. Centered around this day, Korea's largest festival is held for 8 days at Namdaecheon stream in Gangneung.

+ GANGNEUNG DANOJE FESTIVAL KEYWORDS

UNESCO Intangible Cultural Heritage of Humanity

Designated as a National Intangible Cultural Heritage in 1967, the Gangneung Danoje Festival was listed as a UNESCO Intangible Cultural Heritage of Humanity in 2005, truly becoming a global traditional festival

5th day of the 5th lunar month

Dan(端) - means beginning and 5(五)- the 5th day. It refers to the fifth day of the fifth lunar month. Marking the end of rice planting, people celebrate this period of leisure by offering sacrifices and performing rituals to pray for a bountiful harvest.

Suritnal

Dano is also called Suritnal, and "Suri" means "high or noble", referring to birds such as eagles, hawks and falcons.

A Thousand Years of History

A record in the History of Goryeo states that in the year 935, a man from Gangneung named Wang Sun-sik who helped Wang Geon (King Taejo), performed a ritual for the Daegwallyeong mountain spirit while on the way to subdue Singeom. This record serves as the historical basis for the thousand-year tradition of the Danoje Festival.

Rituals and Shamanic Ceremonies

The Gangneung Danoje Festival is characterized by the co-existence of Confucianism, Buddhism, and Shamanism. Jojeonje, a Confucian ritual is held every morning, along with Dano shamanic ceremonies praying for peace and the well-being of the local community, at the Dano Altar.

Shinju and Surichwi-tteok

To celebrate Danoje, citizens of Gangneung gather rice to pray for the well-being and prosperity of their families. This rice is used to brew Shinju (sacred liquor), and make Surichwi-tteok(mugwort rice cake) to prevent summer illnesses and ward off misfortune. The sacred liquor and surichwi rice cakes, made with the sincerity of the citizens, can be tasted at the Gangneung Danoje Festival Experience Village during the Danoje period. Shinju is not for sale.

Yeongshin-Haengcha

The third day of the fifth lunar month marks the official beginning of the festival. The ceremonial procession in which ritual officials and shamans carry the spirit tablets of Guksa Seonghwangshin (National Preceptor Guardian Deity) and Guksa Yeoseonghwangshin (Female Guardian Deity) to the Dano altar at Namdaecheon is called "Yeongshin-haengcha". Following the Yeongshin procession, "Shintongdaegil Gilnori (Street Parade)" takes place, a parade in which residents of Gangneung's towns, villages, and districts participate directly, showcasing the unique characteristics of their communities.

Pulrini, Danoda <Unfolding the Spirit of Dano>

'Pullim' (The Unfolding) captures the quintessential healing essence of the Gangneung Danoje Festival. It defines Dano as a sacred time of restoration—a moment when hearts and relationships are naturally unburdened as visitors release deep-seated sorrows through shamanic rituals, cleanse misfortune with iris water, and shed the weary weights of daily life."

❁ DANO GUT

The Gangneung Dano Gut is one of the core events and most important highlights of the festival. During the festival period, rituals are performed at the Dano Altar for six days, from the evening of the 3rd day of the 5th lunar month until the last day of the event. Through the Dano Gut, visitors can experience colorful ritual objects, performances, and ceremonies filled with various prayers and wishes.
